Dear Barney,

Thanks for your recent phone message and kind words to Dan.

I would have written earlier but I fell at Tim's ranch and hurt my back severely. So badly, in fact, I couldn't move for three weeks. Everything else took a back seat until I recuperated and now that I'm all brand new, here I am.

I meant what I said at the Ambassador auditorium in Pasadena because my word is my bond. In the end analysis that's really what counts, isn't it? Truth, honesty, respect, integrity, keeping ones promises and fiercely protecting ones platform of qualities. Of course you know they all sum up to one thing - Love.

I have done my best to instill this in your boys and they have returned that love a hundred fold.
I wish you could know their depth of fineness as I do. If in teaching them to be courageously truthful you met some "heat" from David, it's only because he has yet to work on tact. He loves and needs you so much that (like everyone) he expects you to be the way he envisions you or for you to react the way he thinks you should.
Give him a little time. His heart is good.
I can see this will be a never-ending conversation so it's best discussed in person.
I'm available. I'll send the FRS information you wish. In truth & Love - Betty
